ALZHEIMER’S DISEASE AND OUR COMMUNITY

Action on Alzheimer’s & Dementia

Presents

A Special Film Screening

An astonishingly candid, loving and revelatory chronicle of the changes their mother’s Alzheimer’s disease has on the filmmaker’s family.

bullfrogfilms.com/catalog/fmn.html

About the Film

Leading documentary filmmaker David Sieveking (David Wants to Fly) weaves an astonishingly candid, loving and revelatory chronicle of the changes his mother’s Alzheimer’s has on his family. Although dealing with his mother’s disease is painful, caring for her does offer Sieveking a chance to reconnect with his family and immerse himself in the secrets and passions of his parents’ long and fascinating lives. Some stories are heroic, while others have left a painful legacy in the couple’s long marriage. Throughout, Sieveking’s delicate handling of these revelations moves the focus of the story away from his mother’s irreversible mental decline to that of a loving tribute to his mother as a human being with a remarkable life story. What emerges is a poignant and rich study of family ties, the delicate nature of marriage, and the unexpected rewards that come from living life to the fullest.

When

Sunday, September 25, 2016 at 4pm

Where

Tradewinds Theatre
Bermuda Underwater Exploration Institute (BUEI)

$10 - for tickets, contact alzbermuda@yahoo.com or 538-5494

Director

David Sieveking is the Director of Forget Me Not Losing Memory - Finding Love. He is also known for directing David Wants to Fly, a 2010 German documentary film that follows, Berlin-based, film school graduate David, as he interacts with his film hero David Lynch, and explores the Transcendental Meditation movement. This film chronicles a period of time in Sieveking’s life that includes his off-and-on relationship with his girlfriend as well as his travels to the United States, Holland and India and has received awards and honorable mentions as well as criticism.